Indians No doubt we fail to recognize the importance they have always held in history. 'Tis to those who previously populated this area we owe for the gay pottery, round gaming stone, hollowed-out grinding mill, arrow heads, and picturesque legends so common to us all.

Father Escalante undoubtedly the first white man in Uintah Basin, with his sturdy band wound his way across Green River, along Uintah and Duchesne Rivers, and on through to Strawberry. Praise to him who first opened the trail.

The Fur Trappers had a real and potent influence upon the basin. Their trade was organized by individual forethought, initiative, and courage. Later, trading poses were set up. This, signifying that the movement westward had been launched, also meant that eventually the valley was to be occupied.

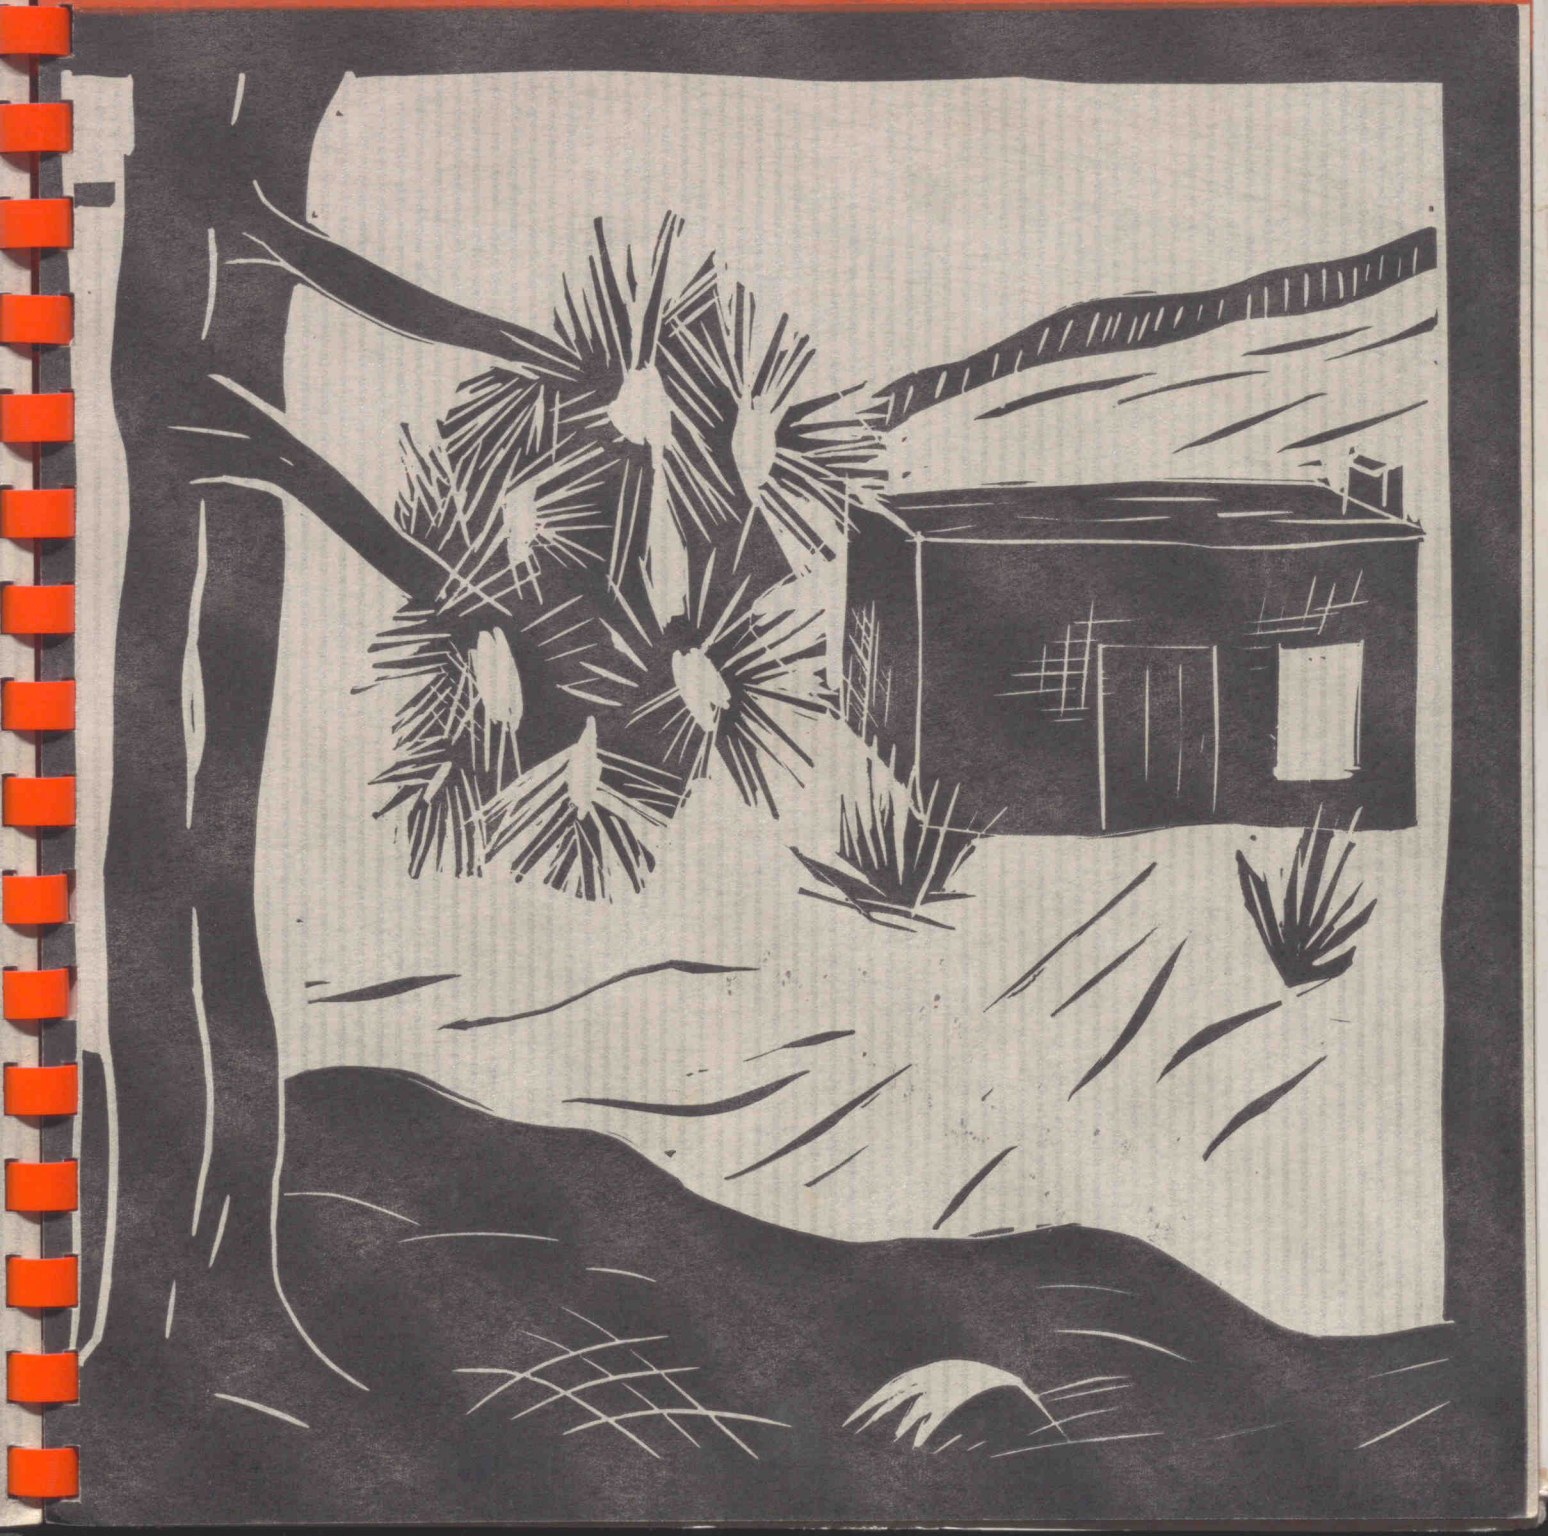

William H. Ashley one of the most noted and successful of all fur traders and after who Ashley valley is named, untiringly pushed forward to carry on the work of "Rocky Mountain Fur Company." On the walls of Red Canyon in large letters stands out the painted letters of "ASHLEY — 1825." Would that there were more memorandums of this staunch, true-blue individual.

Fort Robidoux

Eight years after Ashley's expedition, the first year-round settlement in Uintah Basin, Fort Robidoux, in the present vicinity of Whiterocks, was set up. This was the first chain store in the state and not until 1844 when the Indians destroyed the Fort did its kindly spirit cease to shine.

It is a pleasure to extend a word of welcome and also one of encouragement to the students of Alterra High School. You are engaged in the most serious task of your life, boys and girls, and that is the one of preparing yourselves for life.

To make the most out of life is not difficult, providing you get started on the right road. Success in life is the result of habit and habit is the way you learn to do a thing. Be sure that those things you do in the home, in the school, and in your every day associations are those things that your mother and father and your teachers would have you do. These are the foundation-stones upon which success is based.

Dear 4 me.
I have known you

DUANE P. ANDERSON

Dear pals,
Keep up the good work, with 9 years success & happiness
you

As you are thumbing through the pages of this book twenty years from now, your thoughts will turn back to the days you spent at Alterra High. You are "on your own" making your own living—living your own life. Now you realize that the days you spent in school were very important days. During those days you were laying the foundation upon which your adult life is built. It is not until now that the tremendous importance of that foundation is fully realized. You see the value of those things which during your school days seemed only unimportant drudgery tasks. You are a good farmer—salesman—housewife—stenographer. You are a success in your job because you made a success of your school job. You know and appreciate the beauty of the flowers; the nature of the earth; the phenomena of the weather; the mystery of the stars because you were curious enough to do just a little more than the teacher required. Or, is your life so ideal? Is your life's foundation so strong? Or must you, now that it is too late, see the flaws in that foundation that you and only you put there by poor workmanship? Must you realize that you are unsuccessful because you were the one who left his work in a slipshod, half-finished condition?

Back to the present—Students, this is my message to you. Realize the opportunities that are here for you, make the most of them, and your future happiness and success is assured.

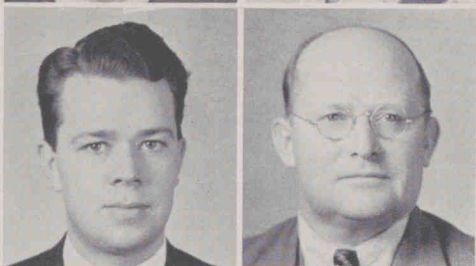

—Duane P. Anderson.

Student Body Officers

Looking back over the past year, we are proud to make note of the splendid school activities that will be long remembered.

A fine attitude toward teachers and toward lessons has been displayed with good spirit and sportsmanship by the student body.

The school assemblies have been one of the most regular activities conducted by the Student Body Officers.

Velma, as president, and her associates—Barta, secretary; Newell, chief of police; and Martin, yell master; extend to the next year Student Body Officers an enthusiastic "Best Wishes!"

Dear Farrell,

Please remember

Seniors

We, Seniors of '37, feel proud that we were the first freshmen of Alterra. We have tasted the deliciousness of her victories as we have also tasted the bitterness (ashes) of her defeats, and we feel satisfied that we have met both with true sportsmanship.

We do not wish to leave our junior classmates our determination that has counted so much in the development of the school. But we do hope that we have set an example that will so impress them that they will appropriate and devote to the improvement of Alterra a far greater and stronger spirit.

Juniors

The Juniors of '37, under the leadership of Reed McKee, Norma Houston, and Dorothea Goodrich, have completed another school year. In school activities and classwork they have assumed the leadership of the four classes. They climaxed the school's activities by sponsoring the largest social event of the year—the Junior Prom. They will be back next year to finish their high school career as Seniors of '38.

Ship ahoy! All on deck for the fourth annual Junior Prom at Alterra!

An array of ships and anchors, a lighthouse, and a clear blue sky became the predominant scene March 26th and 27th.

The sky, made up of light blue cellophane, was beautifully set off by a large anchor and billowing clouds. The rolling ocean was capped with white-sailed ships.

Everyone seemed to take up the magic rhythm of the sea and soon drifted away on their dream boat.

Now, the anchor drops! One more Junior Prom ends as our "Dream Boat Comes Home."
